

Getting Started with Differentiation

Research shows that 70% of US middle and high school students require differentiated instruction.

(Biancarosa and Snow, 2004)

Join us for a day of learning how to differentiate content, process, and product in order to meet the needs of diverse learners.

The workshop will include:

- The Rationale for Differentiation
- Basics of Differentiation
- Summary of Strategies
- Managing Differentiated Classrooms
- Flexible Grouping

“The more we understand how students learn, the more we understand why curriculum needs to be differentiated.”

—Wendy Conklin, Applying Differentiation Strategies

Melissa Raeshide has over 20 years of experience in education, including time in the classroom, school and district level curriculum, and coaching. Her passion is working with teachers and coaches so they can achieve success for themselves and their students.
